Industrial Tour Visits Canadian Fair At Toronto
Reach "Farthest North" After Voyage On Lake Ontario.
TURNING HOMEWARD
Will Return To Special Train At Niagara Falls Late Today.

By GROVER A. ZINN
Special Correspondent, The Star
TORONTO, Ontario, Aug. 27.—After spending their first night in a hotel since leaving home nearly a week ago, the South Arkansas Tourists were called out at sunrise this morning and before 9 o'clock had put behind them many of the sights of this city of the Far North.
The morning's tour included a visit to the Canadian National Fair, Arkansas viewed the display of agricultural and industrial exhibits brought here from the four corners of Canada.
Among the attractions were the yacht races, the International Horse Show and motorboat races. Following the trip to the fair, the group traversed points of interest at the big rubberneck busses, seeing such places as the University of Toronto, the municipal and government building which covers an entire block and houses the postoffice and union station and the museum.
The return trip to Niagara Falls will begin late this afternoon and the trippers will board their special train and take up the trail that leads home.

Voyage On Lake Ontario
BOARD LAKE ONTARIO STEAMER CHIPPEWA, Aug. 26. (Via Toronto, delayed).—Refreshed by the cool breezes of Lake Ontario the South Arkansas Chamber of Commerce crusaders early this afternoon were prepared to invade the heart of the great Ontario agricultural section in the City of Toronto where a two day visit to the Canadian National Fair, the largest exhibition in North America, is scheduled.
The party bade farewell to Niagara Falls early this morning and boarded this steamer for the 80-mile trip down the historic Niagara river and across Lake Ontario.
If any members of the Ellison School doubted the grim greed of the roaring falls that doubt was dispelled when they read this morning of how the giant claimed another life as a New York man ventured too near the brink and was lost in the swirl.
Farmers and others interested in agriculture, who comprise probably 85 per cent of the group, are looking forward with keen interest to the full day's visit to the fair where Canada's vast agricultural wealth will be on display. Wednesday the party will head south stopping Thursday at Detroit.

DeQueen To Get New Courthouse
Contest From Lockesburg Is Thrown Out By Margin of 87 Votes.

DEQUEEN, Aug. 27.—Sevier county is to have a new court house and jail, under a ruling by Judge Ben E. Isbell in the Sevier county circuit court at DeQueen Friday night, after the hearing of the case growing out of the special election held in the county last May 4. The vote in the election on the bond issue for the building was very close on the face of the returns, and the validity of the election was attacked.
The complaint, charging illegality and irregularities in the election was filed in June by S. E. Hargrove of Lockesburg, formerly the county seat. A response and cross complaint were filed by the contestees, through County Judge J. C. Arnold. About 400 votes were challenged as illegal by both sides, in the suit, and were thrown out and a count of the legal votes made, the bond issue carried by 87 votes.
The present court house at DeQueen had been condemned as unsafe.

An Old-Fashioned Baptizing Down in Alabama

When they baptize in rural Alabama it is often an all-day affair, with preaching, hymn singing and basket lunches served on the grounds. This picture shows the baptism of 65 candidates when three Baptist churches held joint services at a creek near Clanton, Ala., with between 1200 and 1500 present in the combined congregations. Rev. A. L. Nichols was the minister in charge.

Tax Collections Break Record

July Exceeds Any Other Month Since Tax Was Enacted.
LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 27.—(AP)—The collections of gasoline taxes for July totaled $930,000, the greatest amount since the tax became effective.
It exceeded by $59,000 the tax collected in July of 1928, according to David A. Gates, commissioner of revenue, and bears out the prediction of the state highway department that under the present plan collections would increase 10 per cent over the corresponding month of the past year.

Michigan State Football Coach Tries New Regime

new brand of football is to be displayed at Michigan State College this year, according to James E. Crowley, new football mentor here.
The method to be used is to have three or four teams ready to play all the time, and the man who is on the third or fourth team one week may be the man to start in an important game the next week. Brani and speed and not beef and brawn, are the essentials to football Crowley says.

Nevada County Is Drouth Sufferer

Mercury Tops 100 Every Day for Past Week Is Report.
PRESCOTT, Ark., Aug. 27.—A light rain brought some relief from the intense heat which has prevailed here during the past week. The government thermometer here has registered a maximum temperature of 100 degrees or over every day last week.
No rain of any consequence had fallen in Prescott since July 2. Crops all over the county have suffered from the lack of moisture. The hay crop is practically a total loss, and the corn crop is almost as bad. Cotton has not suffered as much as the feed crops, but the quality will be cut materially. Farmers say the extremely hot weather and dry hot winds have hurt cotton worse than the long drouth.
Spring branches have dried up and many farmers have been forced to pump water for their cattle. In some sections of the county, even the wells have dried up. Caney creek, which always has been a favorite fishing stream at this season, has quit running, and the creek bed is dry except for the deep holes.
Timber men are the only ones not complaining of the dry weather. They have been busy getting out logs from bottom lands which are inaccessible except during the very dry seasons, and local mills have logs piled high on all available banking ground. No serious fires have been reported yet in the timber sections, but many small fires have occurred.
Old timers here recall the great drouth of 1874, when they say not a drop of rain fell in Nevada county from April to September.

Former Hope Man To Alexandria, La.

L. W. Davis, former assistant postmaster in this city, but who for several years has been a postal inspector in the Cincinnati division, stationed at Middleboro, Ky., has been transferred to Alexandria, La. The transfer will take place September 1.
Mr. Davis' wife has been in the city visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hipp, East Third street, and will join Mr. Davis the first of the month at Alexandria.

Nashville To Have Natural Gas Supply

Company Promises Committee Fuel Be Available December 1.
NASHVILLE, Aug. 27.—Nashville will have gas this winter! This assurance was given a special committee of the Nashville Chamber of Commerce by officials of the Arkansas Natural Gas Corporation at a conference at Shreveport recently. The local committee was composed of J. L. Hill, Lawrence Henson, J. J. Reeder and John Wepfer.
The gas company was granted a franchise by the Nashville city council several months ago, it being the intention of the gas company at that time to have their lines into the city about the first of September. The local committee was informed by the officials that unforced work had been necessitated and this had delayed the starting of the work of laying the pipes to Nashville. The officials stated that they secured the franchise in good faith and expect to carry out their part of the contract. While no definite date for beginning service was given the committee, it was said that service will probably be given the city by the first of December, and the committee was assured that a definite date will be given by the company in the near future, and also that the preliminary work will be started soon.

Court Convenes In Howard County

Judge's Charge To Grand Jury Stresses Dipping Law Violations.
NASHVILLE, Aug. 27.—The August term of the Howard county circuit court convened here Monday morning, with Judge Ben E. Isbell of DeQueen presiding.
The first business of the court was the selection of the jurors for the term and the charging of the grand jury in their duties. Judge Isbell delivered a strong charge to the jurors, enumerating the laws with which they will probably be concerned in their investigations. He laid especial stress upon the investigation of the dynamiting of dipping vats in the county, telling the jurors it is their duty to enforce this law, regardless of their feeling concerning the tick eradication program. He said that destruction of dipping vats, if left unpunished, might lead to the destruction of other property, and urged that diligence be used in the investigations of these cases.

Judge King Dies At Lewisville Home

Aged Lawyer Succumbs To Heart Attack; Was Buried Today.
LEWISVILLE, Ark., Aug. 27.—Judge D. L. King, 79, died here early Monday after a week's illness of heart trouble. He was buried with Masonic honors in Wilson cemetery at 10 a. m. Tuesday.
Judge King was one of the oldest and most prominent lawyers in southwest Arkansas and was the first democrat to hold the offices of sheriff and representative in Lafayette county.
He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Susie Snow King, three daughters, Mrs. Snow Kink Henderson, Mrs. Lillie Whatley and Mrs. Susie King Walker, and four grandchildren.
He was active in Masonic work, being one of the oldest members of Lewisville lodge No. 14. He was also a long time member of the local Methodist church.

Prominent Ozan Citizen Business Visitor Today

S. S. Robins, one of the county's good citizens up Ozan way, was in town today looking after business matters, telling Hope folks about Mine Creek township and saying "howdy" to a bunch of good friends.
Robins is one among the best known men in the county. Last year he was a candidate for tax assessor, second on in a field where many good men were seeking honors. He hasn't indicated his intentions for next year but it wouldn't be surprising if he sailed his hat into the ring when the fun starts.

Village Gets Marshal To Deal With Noisy Visitors

WACO, Neb., Aug. 27.—The peaceful little village of Waco, annoyed by the rowdiness of visitors from nearby towns, has established a law enforcement department. For many years the village was without a marshal and police magistrate but these have been made necessary, it was decided, by the numerous law violations of visitors.
Citizens of the village were of a law-abiding class and needed no officers. Tourists also caused no trouble, but the fact that the town had no law enforcers attracted visitors from towns nearby who came to "make whoopee," much to the annoyance of the residents. It was for the curbing of this element that the new department was installed.

Usual Bombing In Chicago Reported

G. O. P. Politics Cause of Latest Assault On Peace and Dignity.
CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—(AP)—A bombing early today destroyed a retail grocery store partially owned by Shelby G. Braham, republican political leader and formerly secretary to Lawrence King, former president of a Chicago sanitary district board.
Police viewed the attack on King's place as a political move, stressing the fact he was objectionable to a number of active party workers.
Various sanitary districts in the city have been the subject of legal action within the past months, and this bombing is a continuance of a plan of registering objection to the boards.

Home Destroyed By Fire In Smoking Out of Bees

VILJA GROVE, Ill., Aug. 27.—The W. F. Gulton farm home north of here was destroyed by fire recently in a peculiar manner.
A swarm of bees took quarters between the weather boarding of the structure and when occupants of the place attempted to smoke them out, the house caught fire. It was a total loss.

Carolina Strikers In Murder Trial

Court Indicates State's Evidence To Be Restricted.
CHARLOTTE, N. C., Aug. 27.—(AP)—Severe restriction of the state's evidence in the trial of the 16 Gastonia strike leaders charged with the murder of Cliff Adersholt, Gastonia chief of police, was indicated today when Judge Barnhill, in Superior Court overruled a motion of the defense to require the state to make its bill of particulars more definite and certain.
While deputy sheriffs were selecting 200 veniremen from which a jury will be selected to try the case, Judge Barnhill held a short morning session to listen to defense attorneys present and argue a motion to require the state to amend its bill, under which the defendants will be tried.

Many Dead As Jews and Arabs Extend Fighting

French and British Rush Troops To Quiet Outbreak.
HOMES ARE MARKED
Blue Cross On Doors Indicates Neither Jew Nor Arab Lives Within.

BEIRUT, Syria, Aug. 27.—(AP)—The correspondent of the Jewish telegraph agency here today reported that hostilities between Arabs and Jews had extended beyond the frontiers of Palestine, and that French authorities has rushed a detachment of troops to protect.
(By the Associated Press)
More than 100 Jews and an equal or larger numbers of Arabs have been killed in the four days of fighting, starting in a controversy of use of the Wailing Wall in Jerusalem. The trouble has spread throughout Palestine, less threatening in the south and in Jerusalem, but a grave menace in the north.
British volunteers to the number of 600 patrolled the streets in Jerusalem and brought a measure of relief to the terrorstricken population. Christian families marked a blue cross on their doors to show that neither Jew nor Arab lived within.
General looting was reported over Palestine, but with the arrival of British ships and troops at Jaffa it is thought the situation will soon be under control.

Cone Leads Racers Into Trail's End

Arkansas Man First To Cross Finish Line In Long Derby.
CLEVELAND, Aug. 27.—(AP)—Cleveland airports today were the trail's end for air derbyists of the country. Two of the five derbies will cross the finish line this afternoon.
One of the spectacular features of the meet will be the arrival of the non-stop derbyists from Los Angeles, each trying to equal the brilliant feat of Lee Schoenhair who yesterday leaped across the continent in 13:51.
Major Carroll Cone, Arkansas, piloting a Command-Aire, led the Miami-Miami Beach-Cleveland derbyists into Cleveland. Total elapsed time has not been figured and winners will not be declared until later.

Woodmen Plan Big Night September 5

Congressman Parks Will Be Honor Guest of Occasion.
Local lodge Woodmen of the World and the Woodmen Circle are planning a gala night for September 5 when they hold a joint social gathering at Woodmen Hall in this city with Honorable Tillman B. Parks, congressman from the seventh district as honor guest and principal speaker of the evening.
This announcement was made Monday by John Rigsdill, lodge clerk, who is in charge of the entertainment features of the evening. Refreshments will be provided by the Woodmen and served by the Circle.
Mr. Rigsdill's string band, a Woodmen organization and able to make music to a fare-thee-well, will be on hand and efforts are being made to secure the Hope Boys Band for an outdoor concert early in the evening.
While the gathering is primarily fraternal affair, a few citizens will be invited to meet Mr. Parks and enjoy the evening's program.

Cross Roads Gin Starts Business

Co-Operative Concern South of Town Ready for Season.
Farmers Gin, owned by a number of good citizens of the section south of Hope, has started operations and is ready for the current cotton season it was announced yesterday by Jack Kent, president of the organization.
The gin is located at Landers store, at the intersection of the Dooley's Ferry—Lewisville highways, of the most modern design, and guaranteed to give patrons a turn-out of lint not to be exceeded in the county.
Jack Kent is president of the gin company, Glendon Martin manager and B. J. Drake secretary-treasurer. Among the stockholders are John Laha, Mrs. Ollie Formbey, Alfred Hollis, Claud Hollis.
Difficulty in gaining altitude is believed to have been the cause of Dr. Eckener altering his course to Lakehurst. Instead of heading southeast to cross the southern California mountain through the San Georgia pass he directed the ship's nose due south.

Sheriff Improved Is Report This Morning

Report from his physicians this morning indicates that sheriff Dorsey McRae, who yesterday underwent an emergency operation, is considerably improved, rallying nicely from the operation and at noon being resting easily.
Following publication of the story of his sudden seizure and that an operation was necessary, friends from over this part of the state have called and wired inquiries as to his condition, expressing sincere regret at his condition and hoping an early and complete recovery for him.

School Building Planned for Okay

New Families At Cement Plant Make Necessary School Facilities.
The Board of Directors of the Saratoga Special School District, in Howard and Hempstead counties announces the election will sell $10,000 worth of bonds on September 4 the funds to be used to erect a school building at Okay, which is in the district, and to build an addition to the present school building at Saratoga. It is also the intention of the board to let the contract for the work on September 5.
The new school building will be in Okay to be care for the pupils up to the seventh grade, after which they will attend the school at Saratoga. The Okay building is to be entirely fire-proof and of the latest approved type of school building.
The present building at Saratoga, which is a brick structure, is to have an addition giving the school a nice auditorium and gymnasium. A thorough high school course will be taught there.
The erection of the building at Okay and the addition to the building at Saratoga is made necessary by the erection of the cement plant at Okay, and the additional taxes which will be received by the district because of the plant will be sufficient to take care of all the improvements, it is believed.
Officials of the Arkansas Portland Cement Company are co-operating with the Saratoga school board in an effort to secure the best educational facilities for the district possible, and are deeply interested in doing all possible to promote the schools of the district.

Accident Mars Aerial Derby Day

Two Killed and One Injured When Racing Plane Crashed.
BOSTON, Aug. 27.—(AP)—C. E. Devereaux, pilot, New York, and Edward Reiss, mechanic, were killed and Mrs. Devereaux injured, perhaps fatally, in the crash of Devereaux's plane at the airport here shortly after noon. The plane was attempting to make a landing when it fell.
The wings of the Cessna monoplane were flapping and making unusual noises, a condition noticed when the plane came in sight and hearing. Authorities at the army post across the bay said fragments of the ship had been seen to fall. Devereaux was apparently aware that something was amiss, for before the machine became uncontrollable and dipped, crashing on its right wing into a mud flat between the air port and Wood Island.
Devereaux and his wife, a bride of three months, were removed from the wreckage which rested in two feet of water, by a seaplane. The pilot was beyond aid, but his wife was rushed to the East Boston relief hospital where she was entered on the "dangerously hurt" list. Reiss, the mechanic, was dead when his body was taken from the wreckage.

Cheese Brings State Fame

The United States produces about 500,000,000 pounds of cheese annually and of this amount the state of Wisconsin manufactures three-fourths. Wisconsin's cheese industry started back in 1845 when a little band of 108 Swiss immigrants settled down in Green county. Since then the industry has grown to the extent that there are now 150 cheese factories and a number of creameries in the 24 square miles of Green county. Ex-President Coolidge is shown here eating a slice of the famed Swiss cheese presented him by a delegation when he vacationed on the Brule river a year ago.

Graf Has Narrow Escape As Takes Air at Los Angeles

Only Slight Damage Results and Dirigible Goes On Her Way.
HIGH TENSION WIRE
Effort To Gain Altitude Comes Near Being Fatal To Graf.

TUCSON, Ariz., Aug. 27.—(AP)—The Graf Zeppelin passed over here at 10:20, motors functioning smoothly. The ship was flying at an altitude of 2,000 feet.
BENSON, Ariz., Aug. 27.—(AP)—The Graf Zeppelin passed over here at 11:27, bucking a strong easterly wind, but flying high and making good time.
LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—(AP)—The Graf Zeppelin in her take-off here this morning avoided by scant inches a potentially serious accident, escaping with only slight damage as she struck a high tension wire in her take-off from Los Angeles to Lakehurst on the last lap of her round-the-world flight.
The ship contains thousands of feet of hydrogen, a highly inflammable gas, and it touched the electric line in an effort to gain altitude a few minutes after the take-off at 12:14 this morning. First word of the accident was received two hours later when the Radio Corporation of America intercepted a message from the liner saying that only slight damage had resulted and that it would not interfere with the trip.
Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander, anticipated probable trouble in the take-off and effort to gain altitude. He only took 30 persons aboard for the trans-continental hop, despite the fact that 60 persons journeyed over the Pacific in the craft.
Difficulty in gaining altitude is believed to have been the cause of Dr. Eckener altering his course to Lakehurst. Instead of heading southeast to cross the southern California mountain through the San Georgia pass he directed the ship's nose due south.

Cotton Men Aid Dairying

A NEWS item from Forrest City furnishes a new slant on the dairy industry.

Ordinarily we think of dairying as part of that new agriculture, which rebels against the growing of cotton—but over in Forrest City the men in charge of St. Francis county agriculture know better than that. They know that with some dairying there will be more cotton, at least cotton that is more profitable to the farmer.

In last Sunday's Arkansas Democrat we read the following dispatch from Forrest City:

"Among the leaders who are out to inject new life into the campaign for a larger dairy cow population in St. Francis county is C. A. Manly, local manager for the Federal Compress & Warehouse Co., in Forrest City. This company gave away several carloads of milk cows to the farmers last year, and, in co-operation with local business men and industries, is formulating plans to give away twice as many dairy cows this year as in 1928."

Why should cotton men help a rival industry to get hold of the soil upon which it depends for its own raw material?

Simply because something has to be done for the cotton farmer if cotton is to continue to be produced in our section of the South. With a machine agriculture turning out cotton in ever-increasing quantities at a lower production cost, in Texas, the small farmer in Arkansas and other states of the Central South must develop new lines which will partly support him and enable him to market cotton as his surplus crop rather than as his livelihood.

That is what the cotton men recognize in the St. Francis river valley. They are boosting the dairy industry because they perceive that it will give the small cotton farmer a dependable pay roll the year 'round, and he can continue to afford to grow cotton to be sold in the fall for just what the market will bring.

It is interesting to note that Forrest City is proceeding in a business-like way, in this new movement. It has Livestock Finance Corporation which buys cows by the carload, and re-sells them to the farmer on liberal terms. The corporation is underwritten by local business men, and presumably is a co-operative pure and simple, merely covering the interest charges on its stock investment.

No city can do a finer thing than that, for the county and surrounding territory upon which the prosperity of the city depends. It is something for Hope to undertake—but first we must have definite action out of Governor Parnell looking toward the eradication of the fever tick in Hempstead county.

Didn't Get Rich Quick

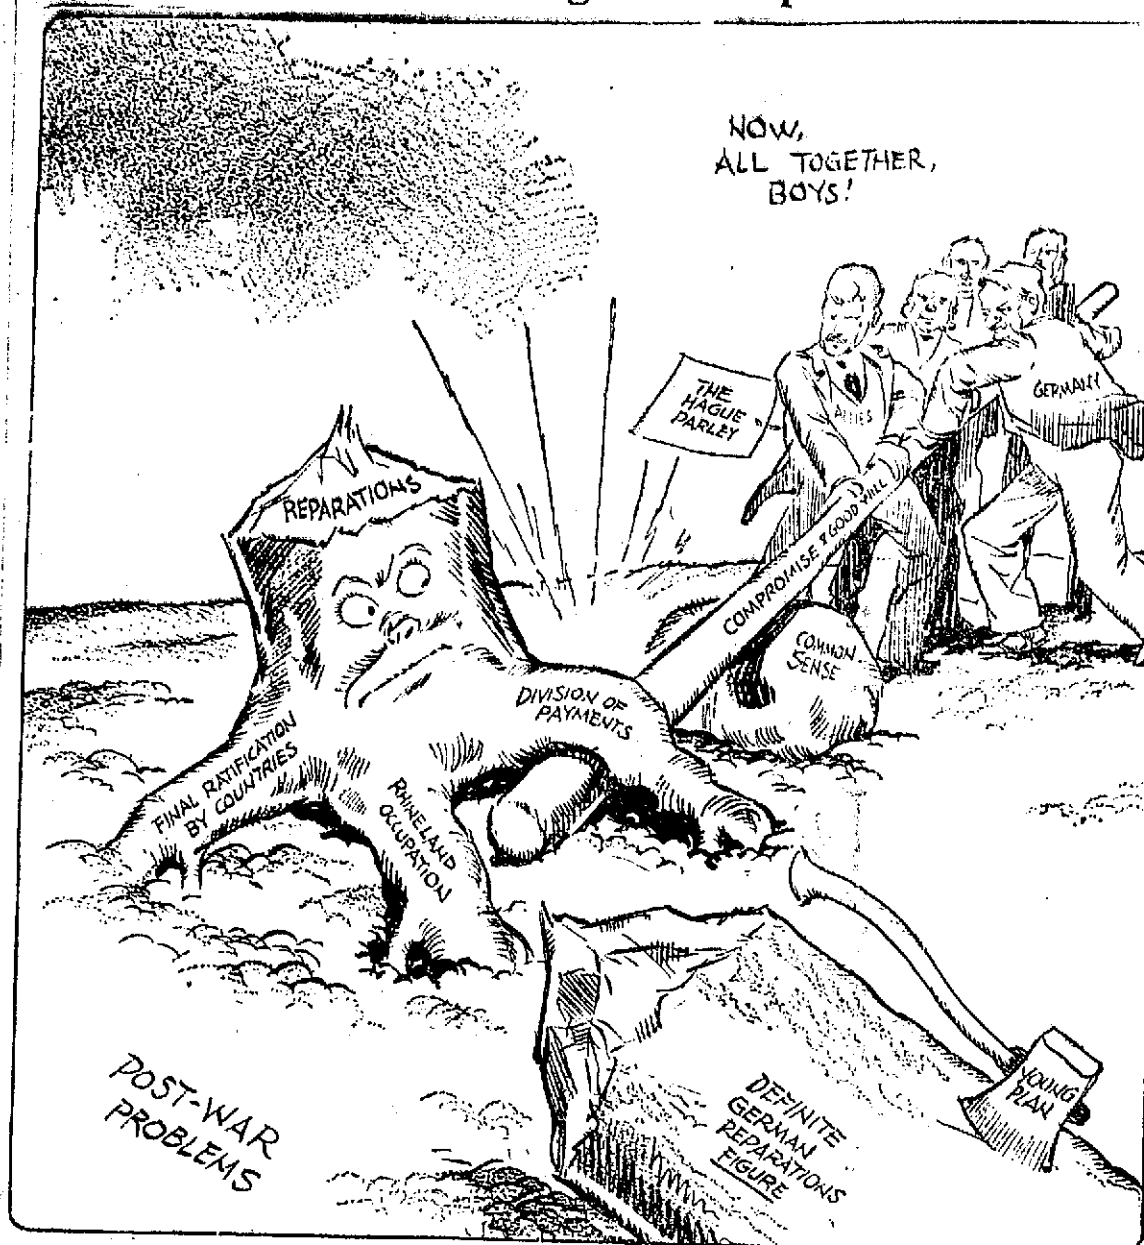

IN Oktibbeha county, Mississippi, milk condensery and a co-operative creamery, both located at Starkville, are paying in the neighborhood of $1,500,000 a year for milk, most of which is produced inside the boundaries of the county. Other considerable sums are distributed locally for operating expenses and profits of ownership. Furthermore, 122 carloads of dairy cattle raised in the county were shipped out last year to purchasers elsewhere.

A cow-and-cotton farm program has created astonishing prosperity. There are negro tenants realizing $1,500 a year from their share of the milk checks, and making as much or more cotton than they used to make when Oktibbeha was an all-cotton county. Similarly, the land owners who formerly used their holdings almost wholly for cotton production, and now are co-operating with their tenants in dairying on a 50-50 basis, are making more money than they ever made as cotton planters.

In an article contributed to the Gazette and dealing with this remarkable development, W. D. Sudduth, Starkville landowner, farmer and banker, after recounting the good fortune of his county, took care to caution Arkansas readers not to mislead themselves. Dairying, he said, is not a get-rich-quick scheme.

To those who had read his articles carefully, that warning was hardly necessary. For if any one fact shines out through his words, it is the fact that the present cow-and-cotton prosperity of Oktibbeha county is based on a foundation of 17 years of slow and solid development.—Arkansas Gazette.

Grubbing the Stump

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—This town used to be full of people who thought there wouldn't ever be any more tariff fights.

The prevailing theory was that the Democratic party had gone high-tariff and that the issue was no longer one of dispute between it and the Republicans.

It was commonly believed that so many Democratic senators had industries in their own states demanding protection that any tariff bill the Republicans cooked up would not be opposed by as much as a corporal's guard.

It was an accepted supposition that the country at large was so thoroughly sold on protection that any new tariff bill, no matter how high its scale of duties, would be greeted by hosannas from the house-tops and public thanksgiving meetings at the town pump.

Sky Was the Limit

Serenely confident that all these things were true, the rulers of the House of Representatives jammed through a tariff bill with the slogan that the sky was the limit and no one expected any further trouble, though it was supposed the hard-boiled Republican majority on the Senate finance committee would adopt a general program of further elevation.

Well—already the bill has been for some time in a terrible jam and when the finance committee's bill hits the Senate floor it probably will enter a period of maceration. No man knoweth the final outcome, but all sensible persons have had to re-adjust their views about the tariff as an issue.

In the first place, a swell fight has developed.

In the second place, the tariff is as much a party issue as it ever was. Democratic national headquarters has been issuing unrelenting daily blasts against the House bill and the Republicans of the finance committee for months. Most Democratic senators have sponsored biting and withering denunciations of the bill and Republican intentions in general. It actually looks as if the Democrats were more effectively united against the House bill or anything like it than they have been on any other issue in the last several years.

Newspapers Critical

In the third place—and most important—the country is not in any receptive mood. By such means as the country is able to protest it has been squawking steadily and some time ago word came from the White House that a study of clippings showed nine out of ten newspapers actually critical.

The effect of this popular disapproval of many of the proposed increases is plainly to be seen in the sweatings and writhings of Senators Smoot, Reed, Watson and other Republican leaders now wrestling with the bill.

The fight on the House provisions has come from many sources—from powerful corporations acting in self-interest and from the most altruistic sources at the same time. The Sugar Trust, made up principally of American interests operating in Cuba, led the fight on the House three-cent sugar rate, aided enthusiastically by the carbonated beverages bottlers, selfish individuals and organizations defending the interests of the consumer.

Pruning Under Pressure

Under this sort of combined pressure, Smoot, Reed, Watson and the others have at least partially caved in. Lately the boys have acquired cold feet on wool and have reduced the House bill rate on that by three cents a pound. They're pruning under pressure and trying to make this bill look just as sweet as possible under the circumstances.

Girl Flyers Seek Endurance Mark

And now the women are going after an endurance refueling record. Peggy Paxson, 17, at right, and Lucille Wallingford, 19, are to take off soon at Los Angeles in an attempt to establish an endurance refueling record for women. They will fly a plane equipped with a 225-horsepower engine, one doing the piloting while the other handles the gasoline hose.

Navy's New All-Metal Dirigible Takes Air For First Time

Here's the newest thing in dirigibles—the U. S. Navy's all-metal ZMC2, photographed as the strange airship took the air for its first test flight at Detroit. The test, staged before prominent naval officials, was eminently successful, the big craft rising to 1000 feet with pilot and four passengers and remaining aloft 49 minutes. Designers say it is no heavier than the ordinary fabric dirigible as the thin metal sheeting does away with the need for interior steel cross beams.

Shipwrecked Crew Saved After Long Fight With Gale

After three days of fighting a mid-Atlantic gale in a life boat, their ship having sunk under them, members of the crew of the German steamer Quimistain are shown in this remarkable photo as aid finally reached them. When sighted by the Dollar Liner President Harrison, from which this picture was taken, the men were exhausted from nights and days of baling their open craft; the commander collapsed as he was taken aboard the liner. All of the crew were saved. The Quimistain, 58-year-old hulk, on its last voyage—to a junk yard in Genoa, began to sink in a furious gale 1000 miles off Norfolk, Va., After the crew had deserted her, the vessel caught fire.

Let's plant a rose beside the road,
Where all the world goes by,
That every pilgrim, with his load,
May feast his happy eye
Upon its beauty as he goes
And breathe a blessing on the rose.
What is true goodness? Who shall say?
Yet, in his heart one knows
That, surely, some of it have they
Who plant a wayside rose,
Or hollow out a spring whose song
Is mellow music all day long.

The SHINING TALENT

By ELEANOR EARLY © 1929 BY NEA Service Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Molly Burnham, whose new book, 'Ashes of Desire', heads the list of best sellers, leads an exciting but rather depressing life. Molly is very much in love with Jack Wells, who loved her once to distraction. But whose ardor seems to have cooled of late. In fact, she is altogether too famous for a struggling young man to marry. Personally, he says, he could never bear to be known as "Mister Molly Burnham."

Molly is considering now a rather unromantic proposal from Bob Newton. Bob is insanely in love with her, but he is an unstable, selfish person, and Molly hates to contemplate marriage with him. On the other hand, he is the father of a little girl whom she adores. Since the death of Bob's first wife, Molly has cared for their small daughter. Now she is fearfully afraid that, if she refuses to marry Bob, he will take Rita away from her. She promises to give him an answer day after tomorrow.

Now Go On With the Story CHAPTER XLII

Red Flynn's mother died that night. Someone telephoned from the office, and told Molly.

Red lived away from town, and his telephone was out of order. Molly was not sure that he would want her to go to him, so she sent a note by messenger, asking if there was anything she could do.

When he received her letter, Red telephoned to say that he had to go to the office. After that, if it was not too late, he would drop in and see her.

She guessed that he was going to the office for money.

"Please come," she urged. "It won't be too late, whatever time it is. It will do you good to talk with someone. Promise me you'll come."

"It may be pretty late. You're sure you won't mind?"

"Not a bit," she assured him. "They said at the office that she didn't suffer, Red. I'm so glad."

"No," he said. "She went very quietly. In her sleep."

"That was beautiful," she consoled. "You mustn't feel too badly, my dear. You were so good to her. The tears people shed over their dead are almost always for their own thoughtlessness. We don't cry so often for the things we did, as for the things we didn't do. You'll never have to reproach yourself. Red. You were the best boy to your mother that ever lived."

"I tried to be decent," he said brokenly. "A sick woman has an awful lot to put up with."

"I know. And you were wonderfully patient, dear. Well, come in, when you can. We'll have coffee together, like we used to. I'm all alone."

It was hours before Red arrived. Molly had gone to sleep waiting for him. He came apologetically. There were things to do at the house, he said. Lots of things. He shuddered.

"My God, Molly, death's a dreadful thing!"

She kissed him gently, and made him sit on her cloth-of-gold sofa, while she rubbed his head.

"Will you go with me tomorrow to choose a casket?" he asked. "It seems they've all kinds. I never thought about them before. I supposed they were all alike. I'd like to get something sort of soft-looking."

"Why surely," she promised. "We'll find one that's dark and lovely, like wood violets, with a soft, sweet linnig."

"They make blankets of flowers, don't they?" he asked. "Something to throw over the damn hardness of the boards?"

"Yes, beautiful things," she told him. "Let me buy it, Red. I'll get one of pale pink roses."

"She liked roses," he murmured. "The sweet-smelling ones. Will you get that kind, Molly?"

She smiled tenderly, and promised as though she were humoring a child.

"The very sweetest ones that grow."

"You're awfully good," he whispered, and drew her hands from his head, to kiss her fingers, one by one. "You're just about the only friend I have. Did you know that, Molly? There wasn't anybody else I wanted to see, but you."

"I'd have gone to you, if I'd been sure," she told him. "But I was afraid I might be intruding. I thought there might be relatives around. There usually are, when people are dying."

"We haven't any relatives," he said. "Besides, it was very sudden. The doctors said her heart was getting weaker. But when the end came, it was sudden. Thank God I happened to be there. I went home early, with some port I'd found for her. We talked for a while. Then she grew drowsy, and dropped off to sleep. She never opened her eyes, Molly."

"That was a lovely way to die, Red."

"Yes," he said. "I suppose it was."

They were quiet then for a little, and Molly soothed his head again with her cool finger tips.

"That light is in your eyes," she murmured. "I'll put it out, and light the candles. Have you some matches?"

She reached for the switch. Red was fumbling in his pockets for matches. The room was in darkness.

Suddenly there was a knocking at the door. A venomous knocking someone pounding angrily with his fists.

"It's Bob," she whispered.

She reached again for the switch and flooded the room with light. "Yes?" she called. "Come in."

The door was flung violently open. Bob, desheveled and furious, stood on the threshold.

"I knew it!" he cried. "I knew I'd find him here."

"Red's mother is dead, Bob."

Molly spoke quietly. "He came to ask me to help him choose a casket. She died tonight, Bob."

"He looks as if his mother just died!" scoffed Bob. "If that's what men do, when their mother die."

"Bob!" Molly laid her hand on his arm. "I don't know whether you've been drinking or not, but you mustn't make a scene here tonight. I tell you that Red's mother has just died."

Red had risen unsteadily to his feet.

"Let him say whatever is on his mind, Molly," he commanded.

"The things that are on my mind aren't fit to say!" sneered Bob.

Red spoke slowly, measuring every word.

"You came here once before, Newton, and I'd have thrown you out, if Molly hadn't begged me not to. Now I think I'll murder you."

"Red."

Molly threw herself against him. "Red dear, you're all upset. You don't know what you're saying. Bob, can't you see that Red is not himself? Get out of here, before something dreadful happens. You shouldn't talk like that. You know you shouldn't. I don't blame Red a bit for being angry. It would serve you right, whatever he did to you."

She was pushing Red toward the cloth-of-gold sofa.

"Sit down, please. Don't let yourself get so excited. Listen, Red. Bob's insanely jealous. He didn't mean to be insulting. Bob asked me tonight to marry him."

Bob advanced menacingly.

"That's more than you ever asked her!" he cried. "You come here at an hour when a decent man wouldn't dream of compromising a girl. And you put out the light . . ."

"That's enough!" ordered Red savagely. "What do you think this is? You're the hero, are you? And I'm the villain, I suppose? And poor Nell here is fighting for her honor? Bah! Run along, little Boy Scout. We don't want to play with you. We don't like your looks."

He turned contemptuously on his heel, and lit a cigarette.

"Tell him to go chase himself, Molly," he instructed over his shoulder.

"You've been seeing naughty movies, Newton. They're too strong fodder for a guy like you."

"I've seen plenty tonight," snarled Bob. "I've seen enough to take my child away from this house."

Molly was trembling nervously. "Don't provoke him, Red," she whispered.

But Red was not to be silenced. "That's the egg that had the nerve to ask you to marry him!" he yelled.

"I want to do the right thing," blustered Bob defensively. "I want Rita to have a decent home."

"If Molly wants to get married," announced Red, "she doesn't have to marry a sap like you. She can marry a regular guy."

"Sh, Red," besought Molly.

"I mean it," he said. "You can marry me. You don't think Rita's the only cute kid that's ever going to get born, do you? Shucks! Rita's a nice little girl, and all that. But you can't tell him she's going to turn out. My God, she might take after her father! Then what would you do?"

Molly tried to laugh. "You're acting like a couple of children," she scolded. "Stop your nonsense."

"Nonsense nothing!" he exclaimed. "I'm asking you to marry me. I'd do more than that to save you from a chump like Newton. You know how it was, when mother was alive. I couldn't ask you then."

"But, Red, you funny thing . . ."

"Funny! There's nothing funny about a man asking a girl to marry him, is there? Maybe Newton thinks there is. I guess he thinks guys in my league never ask a girl things like that."

"Molly is already considering a proposal from me," injected Bob stiffly.

"Yeah? Well, give him his answer now Molly. Give it to him plenty, dear!"

"Oh, Red, don't talk like that!" Molly put her fingers to her ears. "Please don't say any more. You . . . you . . . you're awfully m-m-mean, b-b-both of you!"

She was crying now. "F-f-fighting j-just like d-d-dogs. G-go home, b-b-both of you! I . . . I h-hate you!"

The door slammed on Bob's unceremonious departure, and Molly fell back on her cloth-of-gold sofa, crying as though her heart would break. Red knelt then, beside her, and put his arms around her, cradling her gently.

"Poor little kid. Poor little Molly. I'm as bad as he is, dear. We're a couple of eggs. Ought to be shot, both of us."

"I'm so unhappy," she moaned. "I'm the unhappiest girl in the whole world."

He patted her hair with his big, tender hands.

"Don't let me make you that way. You don't have to marry me, just to get rid of Newton you know. You do whatever you want, honey."

When she stopped sobbing, he wiped her eyes and nose with his handkerchief.

"You're so funny," she declared, smiling mistily. "What if I said I'd marry you, Red Flynn? What would you do then?"

"Gosh, what do you think?" he demanded. "I'd be tickled to

The Unsuspecting Pawn Of a Daring Crook!

Until she was 18, Helen Page was reared in the quiet atmosphere of an exclusive girls' school. Leonard Brent, her guardian, spent money lavishly, buying her expensive frocks in Paris, providing her with every luxury.

Helen became the envy of her classmates. She learned to love her guardian for his kindness. She trusted him implicitly and hoped he would ask her to marry him.

But Leonard Brent wasn't kind. A shrewd and calculating crook, he was only grooming Helen to play a part in his diabolical schemes of fraud.

HELEN PAGE

Unsuspecting, Helen became Brent's accomplice in an audacious plot to swindle an aged millionaire.

Clever and unscrupulous, Brent wrapped the tentacles of crime about Helen so tightly that, on discovering his deception, she was unable to free herself.

Written by the author of "Rich Girl --- Poor Girl" and "High Flight," the story of Helen Page is a swift-moving romance crammed with adventure.

Farmers Urged To Plant Soy Beans

Registration Agent, Warns Against Shortage of Seeds.

J. C. BARNETT

Farm Demonstration Northwest Arkansas, in the Arkansas Gazette

Arkansas expects to grow an average in soy beans, we have to save our own planting and now is the time to think about it.

In the past several years, the average in soy beans has been planting a considerable acreage in soy beans but the majority of the planting seed shipped in, come in price, and been difficult to locate, and result lots of farmers fail to plant any at all. This will always be the case as long as we don't grow our own planting seed at home.

There is sufficient soy beans planted in Arkansas this year to save all the planting seed necessary to plant a million acres, or more. We need a million acres planted and the only way we will ever get that many planted is to save our own planting seed.

If we are not careful, however, all of this year's crop will be cut for hay in September and next spring we will have to do as we've done in the past, either try to locate seed at high prices in some other state or not plant any at all, and too many of us do the latter.

Now is the time to put on a soy bean campaign. We usually wait till just before planting time to holler. "Plant 'soybeans.'" It's too late to holler then as planting seed are not available. Right now is the time for soy bean enthusiasts to get active, urging those

"Preacher" and "The Black Peril" Getting Warmed Up Over Coming Card

Appears There's A Bit of Friction Between the Two and Indications Are the Mix Will Not Be Anything Like A Petting Party.

When the lights are switched over to the Skating Rink Thursday night and the first event of the evening's boxing program begins, just as well get ready to stand up on your seat and yell. That is, if there's anything to be judged by indications.

For both the "Preacher" and the "Peril" are a bit huffed at each other, each has been promised a look-in at a sizeable chunk of coin if he puts the other out—and there's two boxers who will climb into the ring determined to win or bust a home-string trying.

Siki and Terry will put on a good show. They have in both their former meetings and there's no reason to think they will fail this time.

The more you hear of this little black boy from Louisiana the more one is inclined to think Johnny Hall will be forced to put on his best work, for the lad from the land of the Creoles is possessed of something besides a wishbone. He is scheduled to report to Leo Robbins here tonight or Wednesday morning, as is Tillman, the Texas boy who goes on with Alf Taylor for the finals.

Taylor, by the way, is increasing his crowd of followers by the flashy work he is doing in his work outs. He is plenty fast, boasts a pair of good legs and can hit, apparently, from angle. Which makes a previous statement that it looks like a real fight all the more convincing.

BIG BOY WILLIAMS IS ONLY WOLFHEART HERO

Big Boy Williams, the genial, smiling, dynamic cowboy star, appearing with Wolfheart, the wonder dog in "The Bad Man From Bodie," at the New Grand Wednesday is the one and only hero for Wolfheart.

Not that he has expressed his personal desire "verbally," but the fact remains that this remarkable canine Edwin Booth will not be happy with another cowboy as his "leading man." Big Boy Williams learned to love Wolfheart, and they spend many hours romping through hills and valleys, when on location. This good-natured cowboy knows every whim of this dog actor—so it follows that they are perfectly teamed. In "The Bad Man From Bodie," both are seen to excellent advantage. "The Western" is spectacular melodrama of a sort that all outdoor lovers will enjoy. The cast also includes pretty Kathleen Collins, Larry Fisher and Rex Ballard.

MYRNA LOY TALKS IN A STORY OF NEW ORLEANS

Audiences at the Saenger theatre will show their approval of Myrna Loy's latest Warner Bros. picture, "Hardboiled Rose," showing Wednesday and Thursday. Others in the star cast are William Collier, Jr., John Miljan, Gladys Brockwell, Lucy Beaumont, Ralph Emerson, Edward Martin, Otto Hoffman and Floyd Shackelford. The story is by Melville Crossman, the scenario by Robert Lord and the direction by P. Harmon Weight. "Hardboiled Rose" is a thrilling melodrama of New Orleans, in which a convent-bred girl dons the manners of a modern vamp and goes to the gambling house which has been the cause of her father's downfall, to win back his honor and the money hidden there.

A Kansas City greeting card firm recruits its budding artists from high schools.

who are fortunate enough to have a few acres of soy beans to save the seed for planting purposes. Save not only for home use, but save to sell to the neighbors so they will have seed too.

Soy beans are one of our best soil builders and make one of our best hays, besides they serve as one of our best fertilizers for other crops.

Most farmers, however, are familiar with the merits of the soy bean and want to plant them, but entirely too many depend upon the other fellow saving planting seed for their whole country.

If you do not have any soy beans this year but want to plant some next year, try to persuade your neighbor who does have beans this year to save enough seed to sell you some. This will be the surest and safest way to get planting seed for next year's planting.

There are some pea and bean thrashers in almost every county in the state, who, if requested to, will drive from farm to farm and thrash beans either on a fee or toll basis. Find out the names of the men who have these thrashers and go to see them. Men who have thrashers and can do public thrashing would do well indeed to run a notice in the county papers. Just any old way to get more seed saved for it is the only way we will ever get any decent sized acreage in Arkansas.

Very small acreage can be thrashed by mowing and beating out by hand over poultry wire netting stretched over a good wagon body, or some similar way. If a grower of soy beans will not save the seed for sale, he at least ought to save enough for his own use, but seed saving for sale ought to be more profitable in Arkansas at present prices than the hay alone.

We can't make a dairy state out of Arkansas without growing more legumes. Soy beans are one of the best legumes for Arkansas soil. We can't build up the rundown worn-out land of our state without growing more legumes. Soy beans are one of the best.

We can't produce maximum crops even on good land and maintain soil fertility at the same time without interchanging and interplanting with legumes, and soy beans are one of the best for this purpose.

We can't expand soy bean acreage in Arkansas without planting seed, and the only safe and sure way is to save our own seed. Save not only for home use but save enough to sell to the neighbors as well.

You can depend on advertised products

Advertising is the most powerful searchlight known to business. It focuses the attention of a community or a continent on a particular product. It gives that product the advantages of a widespread test by the buying public. But it cannot persuade that public to buy any article it has tested and found wanting.

Manufacturers and merchants know this. They know also that advertising an unworthy products does only one thing: it brings magnified attention to its deficiencies. Therefore, before they undertake extensive or consistent advertising, they make sure that their product is right.

Consistent advertising is your best assurance of value and worth. It is fair evidence that the advertiser is offering a good product which has been thoroughly tested and approved.

The advertisements in this newspaper have been passed by the highest authority—
The buying public.

Hadano's Diving Stunt Tests
Physical Fitness and Nerves

Ninety-Foot Head-First Dive Into Shallow Tank Is Hair-Raising Spectacle To Spectators Who Watch Death-Defying Performance.

Hadano & Co., diving daredevils who will thrill crowds during the Southwest Arkansas Fair here.

Hadano and Company, a trio of diving dare-devils whose sensational performance has never been duplicated by those who make a study of producing new and hazardous performances, have been booked as one of the feature attractions for the Southwest Arkansas Fair.

Hope, September 23 to 28 inclusive.

In the trio are two men and a pretty girl, all of whom have earned reputations for their skill and deeds of daring. Their work calls of utmost physical perfection and nerves of iron. Using a tapering ladder of 90 feet high for a take-off, Hadano dives into a tank of water so small and shallow that it seems impossible that he will fall to a given spot in the water without striking the edge of the tank, to say that it is a "hair-raising" exhibition of daredevilry is using a mild term.

An unusual feature in this attraction is the fact that it carries a clown diver, one that can and does create boisterous laughter. His walk-off is a classic, and he is the only man doing it. When he steps off the small platform perched high up on the ladder, just like he was going to step off a street curbing, nothing can stop the crowds from screaming with excitement.

Not to be outdone by her fellow dare-devils, the girl climbs the ladder and plunges down in a most graceful manner, straightening out her body while in midair. Her feat is known as the "Swan Dive," one that takes years of practice to perfect.

The diving stunts of Hadano and Company have an additional value at night, as they introduce fire and flames as well as fireworks as a spectacular addition to their performances.

The Fire Dive as performed by Hadano must be seen to be appreciated. His tank is flooded with gasoline, more is poured over his body at the top of the ladder a torch is applied simultaneously by both body and tank, and blazing like a ball of fire he plunges to the flaming tank. It seems that nothing short of a miracle can save him from being dangerously burned.

PERSONAL MENTION

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Deaton left this morning for their home in Pine Bluff after a pleasant visit of a few days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Boswell here.

John Ridgill is off on his vacation this week, taking things easy. When last noticed he was leaning up against a light post trying to decide whether to go fishing, hunting or just sit around and enjoy life by watching other folks work. He compromised by going fishing.

Coach Walter Wilson, of Stamps high school, was in Hope Monday, returning to Conway after a visit to Stamps to look over available material for this year's swim of "Yellow Jackets."

Vester Smith, local manager of Singer Machine Co., who was operated on Saturday for appendicitis, is reported as improving nicely and hopes soon to be able to return to his home on South Pine.

H. E. Robins of Ozan was a business visitor here today.

"The Rainbow Man" Is Best Show of Season

If you haven't attended "The Rainbow Man," Eddie Dowling's singing success now showing at the Saenger, you've missed one among the best shows ever in Hope.

Restful and satisfying—getting one away for a brief time from the hurrying, screaming world of jazz, melodies reminiscent of other days woven into the theme—it is just such a show as appeals to those who enjoy the finished work of an artist—and Eddie Dowling is that same artist.

Sing? If you didn't hear "Sleepy Valley" you missed a treat—and if you saw the show and didn't enjoy the old-fashioned minstrel show, parade, first part, olio and finale—well, you have just lived long enough to forget the things making boyhood days worth while.

Woman's 13 Cent Dress Makes Hit With Men

If Mrs. Wilbur Hull of Lawrence county, Alabama, were not already married she would probably have no lack of suitors. At a recent demonstration at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn she appeared neatly arrayed in a cotton dress for which her cash outlay was only 13 cents.

A Snake Story—But You Have To Believe It!

A new wrinkle in modern farming is to put snakes to work. G. B. Jackson of Delhi, Calif., has done it with good results. Gophers were playing havoc with his field of alfalfa, when he corralled five gopher snakes and put them to catching gophers. He estimates that the snakes saved him eight tons of hay, worth $112, from one cutting.

The term "higher education" also applies to the price of the same. An expert asserts that one may become intoxicated on water. Outside the 12-mile limit!

Ohio Folks Friendly To Working News Hounds

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 27.—Newspaper reporters are always on duty, according to the principle followed by the State Industrial Commission.

In compliance with this principle, the Commission has allowed a compensation claim filed by Clyde Schell of the Warren, former reporter for the Niles, O., Daily Times. Schell was injured in a grade crossing accident as he returned to his home after covering an assignment for his paper. The Commission decided that although he had completed the assignment he still was on duty and allowed his claim for $35 and medical expenses.

A similar ruling, awarded the widow of Don Mellett, Canton publisher, the full death award from the state insurance fund. Mellett was murdered at his home.

$75 Loan Leads To Steel Company Presidency

YPSILANTI, Mich., Aug. 27.—"If I had $75 I know where I could make a little money," Donald McLouth told his father a few years ago. "I'd buy some steel and sell it for $125."

The elder McLouth loaned his son the money and the business started. Now Donald is the youngest president of a steel organization in the United States. He is 27 years old. He is president of the Consolidated Steel Corporation, of Detroit.

Well, the Wobbly Driver Usually Hits Some One

Careless drivers are a menace, thinks Saxton Brown, London strong man, whose special stunt is to allow an automobile to be driven over his chest. Recently a driver let the wheels wobble and they went over Brown's neck. Results were not fatal, but the strong man suffered for several days with a painful "sore throat."

Figures Do Mean A Lot; To the Ladies Nowadays

Figures mean something to Harry Smith of Anaconda, Mont., who was seen tugging industriously at the lever of a fire alarm box. The box was number 31 and Harry insisted on yanking the lever 31 times when he discovered a small blaze on a nearby porch roof.

It Certainly Pays To Advertise In Montana

As a getter of results through its advertising columns the News of Canby, Minn., has set a lively pace. A farmer subscriber bemoaned the lack of rain, and the editor suggested that he advertise for it on a "no cure, no pay" basis. The advertisement was placed; it rained next day, and the farmer cheerfully paid the advertising bill.

It appears that China and Russia are just taking a few nibbles to determine whether they will really relish a war.

Girl Who Has Hiccoughed for Two Months Puzzles Doctors

Above is a snapshot of Vera Stone, victim of a strange hiccough malady. The other picture shows her being taken in an ambulance when she was taken to a Memphis hospital.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 17.—An 18-year-old girl, Vera Stone, who has been hiccoughing for two months, has been taken to a Memphis hospital. She has lost more than 10 pounds of weight and has been forced to go on a liquid diet for nearly two weeks.

The case of Vera Stone, the girl, whose home is near Rock, Tenn., has attracted national attention. Hiccoughing is reported to have been suggested by her father over the United States. She has tried many of them, but none have helped her.

When she was 15, she was taken to a hospital in Rock, Tenn., where she was treated for a year. She was then taken to a hospital in Memphis, Tenn., where she was treated for a year. She was then taken to a hospital in Memphis, Tenn., where she was treated for a year.

The Shining Talent

hand. "Get up, darlin'. Sit here beside me. You look like a young man proposing, down on your knees. Oh, Red, you're a peach! I don't know death."

"Honest?"

"Honest-to-God."

She stroked his cheek with her what I'd do without you. It would be sort of wonderful to have you for a husband. I mean for a little while it would. But, in the long run you'd make a perfectly awful husband, Red. You're simply not the marrying sort. You were made to be a bachelor. You're fearfully improvident, and irresponsible. You've all the gay traits that make bachelors fascinating. But you know yourself you wouldn't make a very good husband."

Red seemed to consider the indictment ruefully.

"I suppose I wouldn't," he admitted. "But, gosh, you can't have everything. Molly, a handsome, gentle guy like me. Pure heart, nice sense of humor. . . . Say, what do you want?"

"See here, Red Flynn!" She caught his shoulders, and made him face her squarely. "You don't really truly want to get married. Honest now—do you?"

He grinned unabashed.

"Well, that guy drove me to it."

"I know, old dear. I'm awfully obliged. But you won't mind if I turn you down, will you?"

"You're the doctor," he declared.

"But I meant all I said about being crazy about you, honey. I'd marry you tomorrow, if you wanted. And I'd be awful good to you."

"I know you would."

She leaned against him confidently.

"It's funny, how many kinds of love there are," she pondered. "Now I love you, Red. And you love me. But it's not the wonderful forever-and-ever sort. It's awfully nice and satisfying and friendly, and everything. Only, when you're just simply crazy about someone, it's different. It's agonizing then. And terrifying. It sort of takes your breath away. Did you ever love anyone like that, Red?"

His arm around her shoulder tightened, and he did not answer.

"Do you mind," she went on, "if

Nab Chicago's "Baby-Face Killer"

The "baby-face killer," as Chicago police called him, who boasted he never would be captured alive, has been caught—and not a gun was fired! Willie "Baby-Face" Doody, wanted by federal, state and city authorities for murder and robbery, is shown above, inset, following his capture in a Chicago apartment. Mrs. Lillian Kahler, who was found with Doody in the apartment, is shown above with Lieutenant Al Booth, detective. She said she knew nothing of Doody, or his business.
